On May 19, 2025, the website ZeroHedge succeeded in getting one of their correspondents named Liam Cosgrove into the “new media” seat at the White House press briefing room.¹ This marks an important occasion, an occasion when a major conduit for Russian intelligence active measures was positioned inside the residence of the head of the executive branch of the United States of America. This occasion also marks the failure of U.S. counterintelligence and the lack of will to defend the cognitive domain of U.S. citizens by the current administration. While opening the press briefing room at the White House to “new media”, at face value, seems very American and democratic, opening it up to a website that has communist and Russian intelligence front group connections, and runs articles from U.S. Treasury sanctioned groups, should not be acceptable in the eyes of Americans without at least some sort of precautions like requiring foreign agent registration.

Launched in 2009, Zero Hedge is a successful website, with an estimated 30 million visits per month, that has a huge reader base of libertarians, Republicans, conservatives as well as other readers from across the political spectrum.² It is owned by ABC Media Limited which is based out of the former Communist controlled country of Bulgaria.³ ABC Media’s sole manager is Krassimir Ivandjiiski, a communist agitprop veteran, who worked for the Bulgarian Communist Party’s Central Committee’s newspaper Rabotnichesko Delo dating back to 1975.^{4,5}

Rabotnichesko Delo was illegal until September of 1944 (after the Communist dominated coup d'état in Bulgaria resulted in their rise to power), and it had the widest circulation of any Bulgarian newspaper by the late 1940s.⁶

Krassimir was also a member of the International Organization of Journalists (IOJ) which was tasked by the Czechoslovakian Communist Party's Central Committee and the KGB.^{7,8} The IOJ "was known as the 'long hand of Moscow'", because it had many KGB agents on its staff.⁹ The organization "owned travel agencies, a lottery, a translators' and interpreters' service..." and used its profits to fund communist organizations in "Angola, Vietnam, Afghanistan and other countries."¹⁰ The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency said of the IOJ in a 1955 foreign intelligence report that the IOJ was "an international communist front organization".¹¹ An excerpt from that report states:

Since the time that the Communists assumed control of the IOJ they have consistently made use of its position as an international organization to follow and promote the Soviet propaganda line on such subjects as the Korean war, the peace campaign, colonialism, etc., both among journalists and the reading public at large.

Knowing these Communist associations that Krassimir had, the likelihood that he was a member of the Communist Party of Bulgaria (est. 1mil members) seems high.¹²

A few years after starting work at Rabotnichesko Delo as a foreign correspondent, Krassimir wrote a book titled, Cuba - The Future Is Ours after meeting with Fidel Castro for the first time of a total of three meetings.^{13, 14} This book was published in 1977 by the Communist Party of Bulgaria's publishing house Partizdat (Партиздат).¹⁵ The next book he contributed to was titled, Mao and the Others (1978), and it was published by the Bulgarian Military Publishing House (Военно издателство) under the Bulgarian Ministry of Defense.^{16, 17} That same year, his resume listed that he was "head of offices for Central Europe", presumably for Rabotnichesko Delo.¹⁸ A third book he authored, after visiting Kabul, was called No Nameless Heroes (1985), and it was also published by the Bulgarian Military Publishing House.¹⁹ Also that year, his resume listed him as "head of offices for Africa", also presumably for Rabotnichesko Delo.²⁰ After the dissolution of the Soviet Union, Krassimir started his own publication in 1994 called

Krassimir’s son, Daniel Ivandjiiski, was also born in Communist controlled Bulgaria, and he started and runs Zero Hedge.²² The name Zero Hedge might have been inspired by his father based off this passage, which predates Zero Hedge by over five years and comes from Krassimir’s website:²³

"Zero-based analysis" means that we do not allow the nonsense read elsewhere, heard on the radio and television, to fill your brain with garbage.... "Zero-based analysis" means to go as if you know nothing and build your analysis only from solid realities... "Zero-based analysis" means that we never say "as everyone knows" or "as it is accepted".... "Zero-based analysis" means, above all, to think.

Not straying far from the political orbit of his father, a review of the ecosystem that Zero Hedge is in shows that it is connected to communist groups, communist sympathizers and Russian intelligence front groups. One interesting and early picture of how this ecosystem connects comes from following a link to a recommended website that Zero Hedge promotes on its main page and a website that Daniel posted to very early on in its existence.²⁴ That website is called the Burning Platform, and one of the very first articles posted on that website was titled,

Currently, this citation has Daniel’s first post: Tyler Durden. “BUY THE F#$ING DIP YOU F#$ING IDIOT.” The Burning Platform, December 1, 2010. <https://www.theburningplatform.com/page/4872/>.

“Preparing for World War III, Targeting Iran.”²⁵ The article was published on August 5, 2010, and its author was Michel Chossudovsky (someone that Zero Hedge has republished before).²⁶ The article did not link directly to Chossudovsky’s Global Research website but linked to Alex Jones’s Prison Planet website.²⁷ Alex Jones interviewed Chossudovsky multiple times, read his website “daily” in 2014 and republished his articles on Prison Planet and InfoWars.²⁸

Who is Michel Chossudovsky? Michel is of Russian-Jewish descent, and, like Daniel’s father Krassimir, Michel’s father Evgeny worked on behalf of the Communist Party; his father was a Soviet citizen and a USSR aide to the UN.²⁹ The New York Times ran an article about Evgeny in 1972 saying:³⁰

Even more breathtaking is Mr. Chossudovsky's candor. He underlines that he is for peaceful coexistence without illusions, and in effect warns the West that by adopting his program it runs the chance of presiding at its own funeral. He stresses that ideological competition will continue, and that the Soviet Union still looks forward to the end of capitalism...he thinks the revolution “should be as orderly as feasible and the

Michel also hasn't strayed far from his father's political orientation, and he held meetings with the Communist leader Fidel Castro, and he partnered with the Russian Federal Security Service (FSB) tasked South Front, the Russian Foreign Intelligence Service (SVR) controlled Strategic Culture Foundation (SCF), and he republished articles authored by Russian Military Intelligence (GRU) writers.³¹ Michel is also listed as a member of the scientific committee for the journal Geopolitica which was co-founded by Tiberio Graziani in 2011.^{32,33} Graziani was a supreme council member of Aleksandr Dugin's International Eurasia Movement.³⁴ That movement calls for a multi-polar world (just like Alex Jones does) and integration of post-Soviet spaces into a Eurasian Union.³⁵ Michel is also featured on Dugin's Geopolitika website and Konstantin Malofeev's Katehon website that had two retired Russian

Returning to the Alex Jones connection, Alex hired Kurt Nimmo, as editor for his website, in 2008.⁴⁰ Years earlier, Nimmo published a poem titled, “I Don’t Care.” In that poem he said: ⁴¹

Most of the time I want to have Mao return—an American Mao, maybe who looks like Sid Caesar & kick our stupid, lazy, spoiled, consumerist asses.

A few years before Alex hired Nimmo in 2008, Nimmo was writing for the publication called Counterpunch which was co-edited by the Marxist Alexander Cockburn.^{42,43} Cockburn’s father was a correspondent for the Daily Worker—the newspaper founded by the Communist Party of Great Britain in 1930.⁴⁴ He was also a leading British Communist and was said to be a leader of the Communist International in Western Europe.⁴⁵ Before Alex hired Nimmo,

Over the past few years, Daniel of Zero Hedge featured many SVR controlled SCF articles by individuals such as Pepe Escobar, Matthew Ehret (also republished on FSB tasked South Front), Paul Craig Roberts, Kit Klarenberg, Finian Cunningham, Tom Luongo, Eric Zuesse, Cynthia Chung and others.^{77,78} The SCF was co-founded by Yuri Prokofiev who was a member of the Politburo of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) Central Committee and First Secretary of the Moscow City Committee of the CPSU.^{79,80,81} He was an official in the final days of the Soviet Union and once said, “A person cannot live without faith. Yet another clique of top Communist Party officials who also appear to have had the blessing of [KGB General] Kryuchkov attempted to salvage the legitimacy of the Communist Party by refurbishing the actual ideology of communism...Prokofiev... patronized the creation of something known as the Experimental Creative Centre...[that] hired hundreds of specialists, armed with computers and the latest technology, aimed at dreaming up a new Soviet ideology.

What was this new Soviet ideology? It “imbued secular communism with a theological meaning.”⁸⁴ A new red religion where Soviet managers “were to become ‘knights and priests of the Red faith.’”⁸⁵ It looked like “a fusion of communism, nationalism and Orthodox Christianity, with a dash of something known as ‘Cosmism.’”⁸⁶

Conclusion

While it is common to see websites like Zero Hedge and InfoWars labeled as "far-right" and "conspiracy" driven (and Global Research as "conspiracy" driven), it is far less common, and perhaps virtually non-existent, to see anyone researching the communist and Russian intelligence influence inherent in these websites and connecting that common denominator between them. This lack of extensive investigation, this failure in investigative journalism and in counterintelligence has allowed these networks, that are traditionally labeled conspiracy theory websites, to operate relatively freely for more than two decades under the protection of the first amendment.

Allowing these networks to continue to serve as conduits for Russian intelligence active measures targeting U.S. citizens is arguably tantamount to handing Russia battlefield victories. Consider how the Russians view information warfare: “A new-generation war will be dominated by information and psychological warfare...information and psychological warfare will largely lay the groundwork for victory...”¹³⁷ It bears repeating, “information and psychological warfare will largely lay the groundwork for victory.” The fruit of the seeds of this failure to protect the cognitive domain of U.S. citizens is apparent in the partial takeover by MAGA of the foreign policy positions in the Republican Party.

This short report has sought to provide the tip of the iceberg of the body of evidence that is out there, that the United States has been compromised and demoralized in the informational-psychological warfare domain from a continuity of sustained operations by the Communist-and-now-Russian adversary using active measures conduits. The active measures never stopped against the United States from the Soviet Union to present day Russia.¹³⁸ The intelligence community and the media should consider whether labeling websites like Zero Hedge, Global Research and InfoWars as conspiracy websites while missing the Communist and

Note: After the fall of the Soviet Union Active Measures became more aggressive and numerous according to Tretyakov.

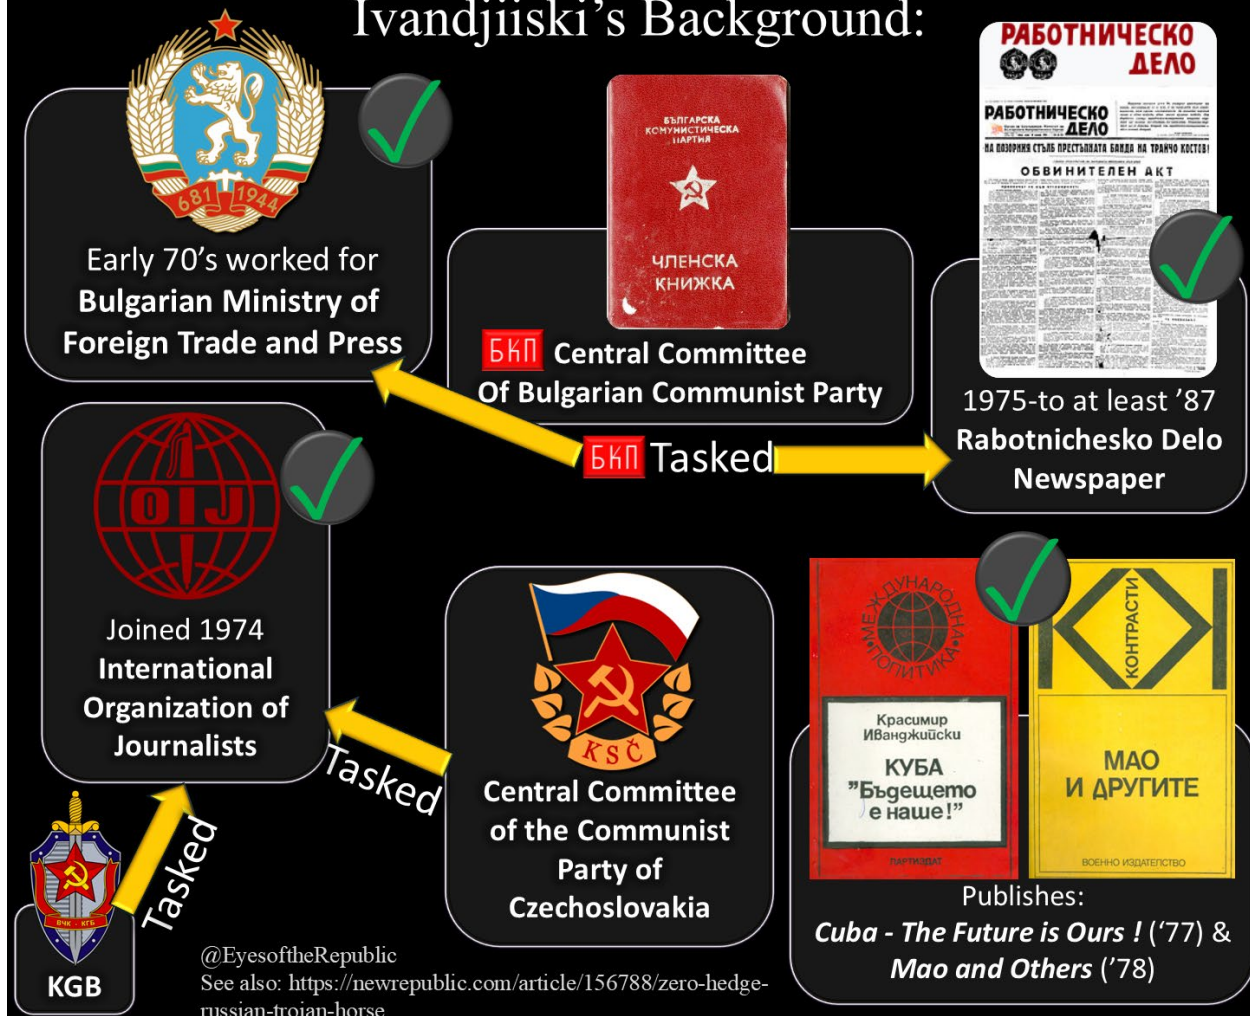

Russian intelligence common denominator has been as massive disservice to the citizens of the United States and the West, or not. It is the opinion of the author of this report that it has been a massive disservice. Furthermore, it is the opinion of this author that websites that serve as conduits for Russian intelligence active measures by republishing authors associated with FSB, SVR and GRU fronts (many which are under active sanctions) should, after proper and fair warning to cease and desist, be treated as aiding a foreign, hostile intelligence service.

Subject: Russian Foreign Intelligence Service Linked Active Measures on www.zerohedge.com

From: James Antonius Fulk

Mr. Krassimir Ivandjiiski and Mr. Daniel Ivandjiiski

In August of 2020, the U.S. State Department's Global Engagement Center (GEC) informed U.S. citizens that the online journal Strategic Culture Foundation (SCF) is registered in Russia, based out of Moscow and tasked by Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service (SVR).¹ The president of SCF at the time of the publishing of the report was Yuri Prokofiev a former Communist Moscow Party Chief and Politburo member.

On April 15, 2021, the United States Department of the Treasury Office of Foreign Asset Control (OFAC) designated (E.O. 13848) SCF for "propagating Russian intelligence services-directed content."² Specifically, it is SVR's Directorate of Active Measures that tasks SCF. Furthermore, OFAC noted that SCF has tried to evade sanctions.

Your website www.zerohedge.com which is owned by ABC Media, LTD (Krassimir is listed as the sole manager) ran SCF articles for many years and continues to do so (sometimes in an obscured manner) even after the GEC's August 2020 report and after the 2021 U.S. Treasury sanctions went into effect.

Given that you now know the U.S. government has identified SCF as conducting Russian active measures against U.S. citizens and that your website has facilitated this information war against U.S. citizens, will you remove the SCF content from your website and issue a public statement to your readers informing them that they were targeted by Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service?

Estimates of your website traffic indicate that it might exceed 30 million visits per month.³ You could do American citizens a real service by limiting the spread of Russian active measures directed against U.S. citizens by removing the content and informing your readers that they have been targets of a foreign, hostile intelligence service.

James Antonius Fulk
